Announcements

- ¶ Judge F. W. Howay, well known among historians in the Pacific Northwest, has made a careful study of one of the problems troublesome to writers for more than a century. His article on the loss of the "Tonquin" will undoubtedly be accepted as the best solution yet offered.
- ¶ The purchase of Alaska has been debated by historians more than any other item of Pacific Coast history. Victor J. Farrar's study of the background of that event will therefore find many interested readers. Much of the so-called diplomatic "mystery" is dissipated by this study.
- ¶ Professor McMahon voices the sentiment of the entire guild of American historians in his tribute to the late James Bryce.
- ¶ William S. Lewis, Corresponding Secretary of the Eastern Washington State Historical Society, is again represented in this Quarterly with an article in which he allows one of the pioneers to tell an important story of the old days.
- ¶ In the new department—Pacific Northwest Americana—readers and more especially collectors will find a number of surprises as to the values being placed on rare items.
